Death and Power

With power comes a great price,
A responsibility not all can carry.
For power breeds hubris, arrogance,
And a false sense that we are strong.

The fear of death hangs above all,
Like a shadow that threatens to swallow.
We seek power to push it away,
To deny the inevitable fall.

A Betrayal’s Pain

Trust, it's a valuable thing
The foundation of connection,
For someone to break it, it's wrong,
A wound that leaves no reflection.

It's a stab in the back
A knife that cuts so deep.
The pain of betrayal never fades,
A memory that cannot sleep.
